VOL. 25 NO. 3
AUGUST 2011

MISSION STATEMENT

The Society's mission is to foster appreciation of the art of P. Buckley Moss, to promote charitable endeavors consistent with her ideals, and to promote the use of the arts in special education.

Letter from Pat

Dear Friends,

Elsewhere in this issue of The Sentinel, you will read about the scholarships awarded by the P. Buckley Moss Foundation for Children's Education as well as the Foundation's Summer Art Enrichment Program for younger students. I am most grateful to you, the members of the Society, for helping to make these scholarships and programs possible, as a portion of your membership dues helps to support the Foundation. Including this year's recipients, 32 students have been able to further their educations and achieve their dreams because of these scholarships.

Thank you for helping the Society and the Foundation touch so many lives.

2011 Renewal Brooch Has a Unique Design

BY THE TIME YOU READ THIS, we will have caught up with mailing out this year's pin. One of the first things you will notice is that the surface of the brooch has tiny raised areas, or "bumps", if you will. Don't be alarmed—these "bumps" are intentional and, in fact, belong to a long tradition in art, architecture, and jewelry design known as "bas-relief" (or "low" relief). In its most sophisticated and elaborate form, bas relief is seen in the wonderful architectural friezes of classical figures we associate with ancient Greek and Roman times. In its original form, the process involves removing the background from a substrate (perhaps stone or marble) and leaving the subject extant, so that it appears to be raised above the surface. In its more modest form in our brooches, this technique imparts a very subtle sculpted effect, giving dimension and texture to the petals and leaves in Pat's image. The raised surface areas add textural relief to the surface to add interest, not only for the feel of it, but for the look of it. The "crests" and "troughs" create varied shadows and highlights that change according to the angle from which it is viewed.

These pins are largely handmade and no two are going to be exactly alike. The intended effect of the raised surface is not to create a precise outline of a single petal or a flower. It is intended to give the hint of texture to match the free-form riot of flowers in the image. Pat's image, while created with tight design, gives the impression of random, free expression. The process we have used in the brooches is likewise free-form, to match the art itself.

Each brooch is pressed out of a mold while the clay is still moist. Not only are there variations in the "bumps" as they are pressed out (particularly in so small a piece), but variations occur in the drying of each piece. So the bumps are not identical from brooch to brooch. In addition, the decals are applied by hand and "squeegeed" off to remove air bubbles and dust from the underside of the decal before being fired. In the process of squeegee-ing the decal, the decal can slip left or right, up or down. It only takes a hundred thousandth of an inch or two "off" to be less than "perfect"—but that is the random beauty of a handmade piece. Then, in the firing process itself, while conditions in the kiln are monitored for consistency, there are variations in shrinkage from decal to decal (they all shrink somewhat, but not precisely the same amount and at the same rate).

Because there are so many variables, we carefully chose an image that would benefit from the inherently random nature of the process, allowing us to account for the variations in form and size of the bumps and their placement on the brooch. The end product is something quite different from prior years' brooches—subtle, yet distinctive and endlessly intriguing. We hope you enjoy yours.

Mardi Gras in July— Summer Celebration

The Summer Celebration event at the P. Buckley Moss Museum in Waynesboro, Virginia, was a huge success, and everyone had a wonderful time. The July 8-10 festivities were a combination of a Museum Open House and Barn Show, Moss Collectors' Convention, Society Chapter Training, and Moss Dealers' Meeting all rolled into one glorious extravaganza.

The weekend began with a visit to the American Shakespeare Center in Staunton, Virginia, Friday morning. The Center recovers the joys and accessibility of Shakespeare's theatre, language, and humanity. It hosts an internationally acclaimed theatre company that performs Shakespeare's works under the original staging conditions; on a simple stage, without elaborate sets, and with the audience sharing the same light as the actors. Even though the Center is so close to Waynesboro, Pat had never been there and was amazed by all that she saw, exclaiming, “What a pleasant surprise for me! It’s an absolutely wonderful place, and I’m going to arrange my trips so I can make performances.”

There were people from all over the country joining Pat for the tour, which amazed the Center’s docents. The tour was followed by an excellent lunch at Emilio’s Italian Restaurant. Everyone enjoyed their day in Staunton!

Saturday’s Chapter Training was fantastic. Chapter Chairperson Shirley Collins did an outstanding job of coordinating the event. Pat’s daughter Patty Moss gave a presentation on the P. Buckley Moss Foundation for Children’s Education and a tour of its office. Mary Kay Van Hooser, owner of Mint Spring Frame Shop & Gallery in Staunton, gave a presentation on framing and displaying Pat’s art. Peggy Goodwin, former Chapter Chairperson and current member of the Foundation’s board of directors, and Shirley Collins gave a presentation on the Society’s member benefits and chapters and what they do. The presentations were wonderful. Participating chapters included Central Iowa, Essence of Moss, Moss on the James, Moss Pelicans, Moss at Monticello, Moss in the Valley, Moss in the Country, Moss Roses, Moss in the New River Valley, Pat’s Angels, and Pat’s Blue Goose. Many thanks to all!

Saturday night’s Dinner Dance was a big hit and raised over $8,700 for the Foundation. $1,000 of that total will go to the P. Buckley Moss Endowed Scholarship. There are so many people who deserve a huge thank-you for making it all possible, including the DJ Frank D. McMillan, who got everyone on their feet and dancing; quilters Camelia Elliott and Lori Hein; the chapters who provided the Mardi Gras goodie bags, the decorated masks, and other items for the auction; and the dealers who donated framing for the prints—a special thanks to Jeanette Stephens, Mildred Wall, and Moss in the New River Valley Chapter for providing mats for the Jubilee complimentary event print and assembling the mats and prints. The matted Jubilee prints were available for a $10 donation and brought in $635 for the Foundation.

The Society, the Foundation, and P. Buckley Moss Galleries, Ltd., all worked together so well to make the weekend fun and successful.

...and the 2011 P. Buckley Moss Endowed Scholarship Award Goes to...

Delawrence Perkins, a senior at Park View High School in Sterling, Virginia, is the recipient of the 2011 P. Buckley Moss Endowed Scholarship, which is awarded to one or more high school seniors with financial need, a certified language-related learning difference, and artistic talent who plan a career in visual arts.

Serious, sagacious, and creative are the three words that Delawrence uses to describe himself. Delawrence has maintained a 3.0 grade point average and has been on the honor roll throughout all of his high school years. He is a talented artist who recently placed third in the Senior Art Contest sponsored by the Loudoun Education Foundation and The Art Institute of Washington.

Delawrence is a volunteer in his community with the Grass Cutters Alliance, where he helps the elderly with lawn care and/or snow removal. In addition, he works part-time as a Student Ambassador with the Metropolitan Washington Airport Authority, working with the traveling public, performing a variety of functions at Dulles International Airport.

Delawrence has been diagnosed with speech delay and auditory processing disorder. His speech delay is complicated by the speed with which he responds to questions and the way he puts words together, but he has not let his disability stand in his way, saying, "Since I have to focus my attention on the task at hand, I am the first one to get down to business with my schoolwork or job-related task."

Being creative, he expresses himself through his art, specifically drawing. Delawrence says, "I consider my art a way of expressing myself when my words fail me."

In the fall of 2011, Delawrence will be attending the Corcoran College of Art and Design in Washington, DC. As a serious student, Delawrence states, "This is a school that is serious about preparing its students for a life in the Arts."

"I can see myself in future years sharing my experiences, my triumphs, struggles, and mistakes with other young artists. I hope to give back to the community in a capacity where I can help others who also want to pursue visual arts as a career."

John Knudsen Receives 2011 Anne and Matt Harbison Scholarship

The recipient of the 2011 Anne and Matt Harbison Scholarship is John Knudsen. This scholarship is awarded to one high school senior with a certified language-related learning difference who is pursuing post-secondary education. Despite his academic challenges and learning differences, John Knudsen has excelled as a student, athlete, and outstanding member of Longwood Senior High School in Middle Island, New York.

John's dyslexia causes him problems with written language. John states, "I can explain anything out loud, but writing the same answer is very difficult for me. Reading is automatic for some people; nothing in reading is automatic for me. To this day, I sound out every word I read."

During his high school years, John was class representative of the school's student government, treasurer of the student council, and sergeant at arms and was a key organizer in multiple blood drives, Olympic Nights, Senior Citizens Proms, and Safe Halloween.

John played varsity football as well as baseball and basketball. John's teachers stated, "He never seems to simply be just a member of clubs and organizations; John goes into everything he does with gusto and flare. He has a natural ability to lead and motivate people to do their best; and, oftentimes, he focuses much of his time on helping others who are less fortunate."

Looking into the future, John states, "I can see myself standing in a classroom teaching special education kids. I had so many supportive teachers in Longwood. I would like to be that teacher for someone else. That is what I would like to do." John has applied to colleges with Special Education majors and has been accepted at various colleges. He is in the process of deciding which college to attend.

Andrew Dempsey-Karp is the Recipient of the 2011 Judith Cary Leadership Memorial Scholarship

United States Peace Corp volunteer-Dominican Republic, contagious energy for teaching and learning, creative, a leader, committed to service and community, compassion for others, commitment to the field of special education, and penchant for teaching are but a few of the descriptions for the 2011 winner of the Cary Scholarship, which is awarded to a student who is working either full-time or part-time toward special needs certification or an undergraduate or graduate degree in some field of special education.

Andrew Dempsey-Karp is a graduate from the University of Wisconsin-Madison with a degree in psychology and has worked as an instructional assistant at The High Road School for severely emotionally disturbed children in Norwalk, Connecticut. He then followed his dream of becoming a U.S. Peace Corps volunteer and taught Spanish literacy to elementary students with learning differences in reading in the Dominican Republic.

While living in New York City, Andrew worked as an Urban Park Ranger in Manhattan. Andrew said, "Most inner city children have little contact with wilderness areas. As a Park Ranger, I visited K-12 classrooms and recreation centers throughout Manhattan to present information on park history and wildlife. I led special education and general education students on tours of Central Park and Inwood Hill Park. It was a thrill to see students' eyes light up with excitement as they hiked, caught a glimpse of a red tail hawk, marveled at the forest canopy, or simply sat and listened to the quiet sounds of nature."

Andrew looks forward to further developing his teaching skills as a master's elementary special education student at the University of Oregon, specializing in high-incidence learning disabilities. He will also pursue ESOL and Reading Specialist endorsements. Andrew states, "In my opinion, incorporating a strength-based approach and setting challenging but realistic expectations are necessary components of a successful special education program. It is the teacher's responsibility to identify and positively reinforce each student's strengths."

"Working with special needs population has enriched my understanding of human interaction and encouraged me to pursue a career in special education."

Advisory Council Reviews Member Benefits

One of the most important jobs of the Advisory Council is to monitor the needs of the membership and try to fine-tune the members' benefits to meet those needs. In the recent past we have introduced the Rewards Card and made some design changes to the brooch (see page 1) in an effort to upgrade the benefits we provide members.

The Rewards Card program has gathered momentum, with over 1,500 transactions being made to date. This is still just a fraction of the number of transactions being made by Society members across the country—please remember to use your Rewards Card (which is the same as your membership card) when you make a purchase at your gallery or online.

Getting in the habit of using your card has its payoffs. After you have earned a certain number of points on your card, you will be sent a gift certificate for future purchases. You may find that you will be able to acquire some of your Holiday gifts "for nothing"—or at least for "a lot less."

The Advisory Council is now looking at creating a pocket-size address book and a bracelet. Both products are in the very early stages of development, and we don't have anything yet we can show you here but hope to feature more about them in future issues of the Sentinel.

The Advisory Council is comprised of a group of veteran Society board members who are charged with developing the Society while observing its long held traditions. Members include Mary Lou McMillin, Marlyn De Waard, Ginger Cloonan, Rev. Harold Henning, Lance Allen, and Jake Henderson.

We are always interested in hearing your thoughts about member benefits. If you would also like to be kept abreast of these products as they develop, please email us at society@mossociety.org with the subject line "Product Development" and we will send you email updates.

2011 Summer Art Enrichment Program

The P. Buckley Moss Foundation for Children's Education held three one-week sessions for its Summer Art Enrichment Program. All three sessions were held at the P. Buckley Moss Museum in Waynesboro, Virginia. Session 1 was for four- and five-year-olds; Session 2, for six- and seven-year-olds; and Session 3, for eight- and nine-year-olds. The theme for all three sessions this year was This Land is Your

Land; This Land is My Land, based on the Woody Guthrie song. The opening lines of the song are "...From California to the New York island; From the red wood forest to the Gulf Stream waters...", and the children learned about our wonderful country through the song and their paintings, which depicted cityscapes, the red wood forest, seascapes, and the desert.

Teachers Leslie Allen and Sharon Morris and the Foundation staff hosted an art exhibit at the Museum at the end of the three-week program for all the students' family members to see what great work the children did. The exhibit was held on July 1.

These children are part of the group of 24 four- and five-year-olds who participated in Session 1 of the Foundation's Summer Art Enrichment Program. They are standing in front of their red wood forest drawings, while singing This Land is Your Land and holding up scenes from across our country. They sang the song for their parents before dismissal one day, and the parents were very impressed.

The Summer Art Enrichment Program reception was held on July 1. Over 200 parents, siblings, and grandparents attended the event, and the children were so proud to show their masterpieces to their families.
